THE WINEMAKING

Rosso di Marchesi is a distinctive red blend that is a homage to Rudy Marchesi's Italian heritage. Carlo and Rosa Marchesi, Rudy's grandparents, loved, tended and respected the land in their hometown in Northern Italy. They grew and produced their own food, made their own wine and thrived on a sustainable lifestyle. When they immigrated to the United States, they continued this tradition and instilled a love for the land in their grandson. Crafting this unique blend is a nod to them and to hearty Italian wines, yet with its own Oregon twist.

This is the sixth Rosso di Marchesi, hence the name 'Sesto Atto,' or Sixth Act. Crafted in the style of a red Italian table wine, this is a unique blend of Lagrein, Sangiovese, Nebbiolo, Teroldego and Pinot Noir. The Teroldego, Lagrein and Pinot Noir are grown on our estate vineyards, while the Sangiovese and Nebbiolo come from two well-respected vineyards from the esteemed Red Mountain AVA in Washington State. These varieties each offer pleasingly different characteristics in this versatile, food-friendly wine.

THE WINE

This sixth version of this popular Italian-style red blend, Rosso di Marchesi, is a tantalizing blend of Lagrein, Sangiovese, Nebbiolo, Teroldego and Pinot Noir. Densely packed aromas unleash with each swirl, including blackberry jam, raspberry, red currant, anise and tobacco leaf. There is interesting interplay between fruit and savory flavors, with pomegranate, dark chocolate and Bing cherry. The texture is slightly chewy and finishes on a high, fresh note.
